This AM I walked the Sawyer Trail system to map out...smooth GPS trace...the primary loop and branch segments using the "pause" button on the AllTrails app. I made a couple of errors is using the pause...some retraceing...but it worked pretty well. Open the link below for the completed map. I wanted to include a photo...as a way point...to see how that was identified and referenced. I used the big White Ash tree. I think at this point AllTrails provides a pretty accurate map that one could follow on the trail. I have to check again the hiking distance (3.5 miles) and moving time (1:17 hrs) since I had a few retracing. Third time is the charm.

PS I checked again the Slade Town Forrest and did find the remnants of an old field road/trail down thru the property. I wasn't visable earlier with the snow. It might be wise to blaze it as a way down to the pond...pond is very active with numerous beaver lodges.
